

The Biggest Truck in the World

The biggest truck in the world will travel around the equator on special elevated tracks. If the truck traveled fast enough, the rotation of the earth could be increased to provide one thousand 8.766 hour days per year. The mass of the truck would counteract the Earth's gravity, making it economical to transport goods and wastes beyond the atmosphere and into space. The truck is large enough to accommodate billions of people, making global transportation both inexpensive and safe.
